

Speaker 1: Philosophy helped set the stage for the arts with the writings of Immanuel Kant at the end of the 1700s and the expansion of Kant's work through transcendentalism. These philosophies brought our senses into further question and scrutiny and instigated thought into the nature of reality and the nature of what we can't perceive with our senses, as well as questions of the nature of God and the human spirit. These reflections and philosophy can all be found in the visual arts in music and in theatre.

[00:00:33] [END OF AUDIO]