

Speaker: Noguchi is a Japanese-American sculptor and he studied with early modern sculpture Brâncuși, whose associated with the expressionists. Noguchi's love for Japanese art was infused into his sculptures and rather than trying to force subject matter out of these natural elements, he sought to uncover the ultimate naturalists and beauty from materials. He's also noted as a furniture designer and those wonderful white paper lanterns you see they sell in the Ikea and Japanese specialty stores, well he was the first one to invent those.

[00:00:42] [END OF AUDIO]